SUMMARIES OF CONTRIBUTIONS,
STATE COMMITTEES OF MAJOR PARTIES, 1981

Contributions and other funds received by the Republican and Democratic state committees as reported to the Public Disclosure Commission during 1981 are summarized on the following pages.

The figures as to the number of contributors in various amount categories were computed by the commission staff from reports submitted by the party committees. The Republican committee submits a computer printout listing contributors as an attachment to its monthly report (form C-4), and this printout, rather than the deposit reports (form C-3), was used in this tabulation.

For part of 1981, two state Democratic party committees filed disclosure reports. The data in this 1981 summary is from the reports of the Washington State Democratic Central Committee, Karen Marchioro, chairman.

POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

During 1981 there were 108 political committees classified as business-related which reported to the Public Disclosure Commission. Their total receipts for the year were $1,815,971, and expenditures were $963,778. There were 59 labor-affiliated committees reporting receipts of $983,010 and expenditures of $649,791.

Of these 167 committees, there were 8 who either received or spent more than $50,000 during the year. These major political action committees included:

PULSE (Political Unity of Leaders in State Education)--a committee of the Washington Education Association. Members' dues are $13.00 annually.

United for Washington--a committee for business and individual members supporting the free enterprise system. In 1981 it had 895 contributors, 539 of whom gave $100 or less. Its 10 largest contributors, giving $5,000 or more, were: ONB Corporation, $10,000; Puget Sound Power & Light, $8,000; Rainier Bancorporation, $6,000; Simpson Timber Company, $6,000; Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Company, $5,055; First Associates, Pacific Power and Light, Shell Oil Company, Weyerhaeuser Company, and Winmar Company, $5,000 each.

Washington Federation of State Employees--Legislative Fund (WFSE). Each month 80 cents per each member of the union is deposited to this fund.

Realtors' PAC (RPAC-WA)--a committee of the Washington Association of Realtors which made in-kind contributions of $8,450 to the committee. Contributions from individuals and firms range from $1 to $1,000.

LAWPAC--a committee of the Washington State Trial Lawyers Association.

First Associates--a committee of officers of Seattle-First National Bank.

WSLC-PPP (Washington State Labor Council PPP Committee)

Code and Legislative Committee, Washington State Association of the U.A. of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Industry--receives dues of 55 cents per member monthly from 10 local unions.

Some additional details concerning the 1981 activity of these leading PACs follow.

1980 ELECTION FINANCING

FACT BOOK

Compiled by Washington State
Public Disclosure Commission

March, 1981

Printed by the Washington State Dept. of Printing
Olympia, Washington

FOREWORD

The 1980 Election Financing Fact Book is published by the Washington State Public Disclosure Commission pursuant to its authority as contained in RCW 42.17.370 (2) to publish reports and statistics concerning campaign financing so that such information may be fully disclosed to the public.

During the 1980 election year, 1,640 candidates and committees reported political transactions to the Commission totaling $25 million. The Fact Book is a review and summary of those transactions that is intended to assist the public in learning how the campaigns were financed. The intent of the public disclosure law is to inspire confidence in government by requiring, among other things, that campaign financing be at all times an open book. The Fact Book is derived from the open books of the 1980 elections.

Material in this book is based on reports as filed by candidates and political committees, most of them unaudited. Every effort has been made to assure accuracy of calculations in compiling the statements in this book.

Total Expenditures by Legislative Candidates	$1,615,630	$2,067,427	$2,790,628	$4,294,209
% of increase		(+28%)	(+35%)	(+54%)

The increases from 1978 to 1980 are the largest yet recorded. In 1980, for the first time, some campaigns exceeded $50,000 in total expenditures, with the highest amount reported by a single candidate being over $62,000. Four years ago the highest amount reported by a single candidate was just under $40,000.

Candidates received approximately $1,600,000 more in contributions in 1980 than in 1978. The largest share of this additional money came to candidates through political action committees (PACs). With estimated contributions of $1,643,000, PACs provided 37% of the money received in 1980, compared with $907,000 that accounted for 31% of the total in 1978.

Direct contributions of money and in-kind services from political party organizations also were substantially higher in 1980, especially for the Republican candidates. The Republican National Committee and GOPAC, also a national Republican organization, contributed $123,950, compared with $35,000 from the RNC in 1978. The state Republican party contributed $125,755, almost three times as much as it had contributed in 1978. The state Democratic party reported contributing $9,700 to legislative candidates, down from $14,625 in 1978. County, district, and other local party clubs and organizations gave Republican candidates $54,209 and Democratic candidates $39,562.

Contributions by individuals increased from $993,000 to $1,164,000, but did not keep pace with the increases from PACs, party groups, businesses, associations, committees, unions, and other organized sources. Individual contributions actually declined from 34% of the total received in 1978 to 26% of the 1980 total. There was a gain in the number of individual contributions reported from 34,648 in 1978 to 39,100 in 1980, but the average size of individual contributions increased only $1.11 from $28.66 to $29.77 while the average PAC contribution amount went from $210.75 to $330.82.

but the average size of individual contributions increased only $1.11 from $28.66 to $29.77 while the average PAC contribution amount went from $210.75 to $330.82.

The amount of money that came to the legislative campaigns in donations of $25 or less declined from 17% of the total received in 1978 to 12% in 1980. Contributions greater than $500 provided 22% of total funds in 1978 and 31% in 1980. (These figures do not include contributions from party organizations and caucuses, most of which were also in the over$500 range.)

On the following pages of this section are various tables summarizing some of the contribution and expenditure information submitted by the legislative candidates. The tables are followed by district-by-district reports itemizing major contributions to all legislative candidates whose names appeared on the general election ballots.

JOINT FUND RAISERS

Some legislative candidates formed temporary committees for the single purpose of conducting a fund-raising event in conjunction with another candidate. Generally, these committees paid the expenses involved in conducting the event and then divided the remaining funds evenly and distributed them to the principal campaign committees of the two candidates.

On the preceding pages where major contributors to each candidate are identified, the amounts received from such joint fund-raising committees are listed as a single lump sum contribution to the candidate. The separate organizations and individuals that contributed to the joint event are not listed on the candidate pages. Following is a list of the joint fund raisers reported by legislative candidates involved in the 1980 election with the names of contributors of $200 or more to each joint committee.

POLITICAL COMMITTEES

Political Committees

Key to Names and Abbreviations

POLITICAL COMMITTEES

Most of the committees included in the groupings on this page are those defined in the public disclosure law as "continuing political committees," not established in anticipation of any particular election. Most of them are also what has commonly become known as PACs--political action committees. Such committees collect contributions from individuals or organizations having a common interest--place of employment or membership in a trade or professional association or labor union--and in turn make contributions to candidates and other campaign committees. For additional data concerning political action committees, see Section VII, "Trends and Comparisons."

TRENDS AND COMPARISONS: POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

The impact of PACs on campaigns has increased in every election since candidates and committees began filing disclosure reports. In 1974 there were seven PACs whose contributions to legislative candidates and caucuses exceeded $10,000. Together these seven PACs contributed $281,030 to legislative campaigns in 1974. In 1980, the same seven PACs gave $707,607 to legislative campaigns. With an estimated $1,643,000 in total contributions, PACs provided approximately 37% of the total amount that legislative candidates had available to spend on their campaigns in 1980.

Table V below tracks the legislative contribution records of the seven largest PACs of 1974 as well as those of some additional committees whose activities reached comparable levels in subsequent years. United for Washington, doubling its 1978 contributions in 1980, has maintained its position as the leading PAC. The Washington State Labor Council (PPP Committee) is the only listed PAC whose 1980 contributions were less than 1978. The Washington Federation of State Employees and the Realtors' PAC have both risen considerably from relatively small beginnings in 1974. The United Public Employee Coalition, fourth largest PAC in 1978, was no longer active in 1980.

United Public Employee Coalition	-0-	-0-	75,500	-0-
Realtors' PAC	4,937	6,216	35,470	47,040

The changing character of PAC activity over the years is also demonstrated by the fact Washington Medical PAC and Washington Bank PAC, two of the top seven PACs in 1974, have been surpassed by PACs representing state employees, dentists, realtors, builders, optometrists, and trial lawyers. Table VI lists these among the top 12 PACs of 1980. Only 4 of the 124 legislators elected in 1980 were elected without assistance from any of these 12 PACs.

Another indication of the increased impact of PACs is the steady increase in the size of the average contribution, as shown in Table VII.

With the exception of United for Washington, which contributes only to legislative candidates, most of these PACs also made contributions to state or local candidates, but the figures used in these tables reflect legislative contributions only.
